

The Self-Study Process for NC's Family Child Care Homes

Self-study planning form

This form may be used to generate ideas and document initial plans for a self-study. You may also choose another way to document your plans; this is only an example. Remember, this is one tool to use to document part of the self-study process, but it does not represent the entire 3-month process.

Area of focus:

What is going well?

What can be improved?

What related resources or plans do I have already?

What other resources, strategies, or changes would be helpful try?

Self-reflection in 3-2-1

This form may be used to reflect on what was learned after viewing new information in preparation for a self-study, such as the FCCERS-R or resources at ncrlap.org. Alternately, this form may be used to wrap up a self-study process and keep ideas in place for future work. You may also choose another way to document your process; this is only an example. Remember, this is one tool to use to document part of the self-study process, but does not represent the entire process.
